Originally published in Advice for Seekers, was the result of Spurgeon's desire to compel all of those whom he saw wandering just outside the gate of salvation to come in. The soothing colors remind me of coffee!

Grab a copy and perhaps give a copy away as a gift. He could anticipate the best. Yet, if they read the book in its entirety, they will likewise see Spurgeon's Biblical view of God's perfection, His hatred of sin, His demanding of total repentance. Be uplifted and have your Advice for Seekers affirmed in this powerful book for seekers as well as believers. Attic Books has done it again - produced a new, reprinted version of the book that looks like a classic book.

His love for Christ is like a great flame shining out of everything he wrote. He is not lukewarm in his stand for the gospel of Christ.
