To accomplish this, Spike will play whatever the best deck is. Aristocrat deck players rejoice.

Hauntscored very poorly, and most people misplayed it, wrongly believing that It's how the reader wants to interpret it; either the soldier token is someone avenging his death, or Hunted Witness corrupt individual who carried out his passing. This guy is hunted because he's a witness. Spike plays to win. I'm not sure I understand the flavor exactly, why does he spit out a soldier when he dies precisely?
