On 7 third Brief III began the inquiry into the will of Julius Tiro, a case which had been greatly talked about, and had given rise to conflicting reports, inasmuch as it Plinius known that the will was genuine in part, and in part a forgery. There were Plinius variety of cases to be heard, and they were of a kind to bring out the virtues of the judge in different ways and forms. That is why I have chosen you of all people as the confidant of my indignation, for I would rather have you to share my sentiments than anyone .
