Through the Lower Mekong Initiative, we have established a multinational partnership with Burma, Cambodia, Laos, Thailand and Vietnam to promote regional cooperation to achieve equitable, sustainable, and inclusive economic growth. The region is already an engine of the global economy, and major Asian countries are becoming global economic and political actors. Securing ambitious emissions reductions commitments from these countries is critical to the success of the upcoming Conference of Parties in Paris.

To complement TPP, we are pressing forward the work of Asia Pacific Economic Cooperation. We are pursuing joint initiatives in areas of mutual interest such as climate change, global public health, sustainable development, nonproliferation, and countering transnational organized crime.
