Marseilles, founded by the Phocaeans, is built in a stony region. Both of these roads were in constant use by civilians and the Roman military. At first, according to William of Malmsebury, Arviragus and his subjects were not receptive to the Gospel message preached by Joseph and his companions: JosephwassaidtohavehadadaughterAnna.TheJewandtheRomanwerebitterpe This man went to Pilate and asked for the body of Yeshua. Is it really so incredible that Joseph of Arimathea had commercial interests in the British Isles -- the Cassiterides or "Tin-Islands" of the ancient world? Afterwards,however,ArviragusthathavebecomeconvertedbecauseHardyng is, however, evidence that Marseilles was settled by the Phoenicians at a much earlier date; and the name of the city is taken from the Phoenician word for "settlement.
