Subsequent names in Luke, as well as Matthew's next name Abiud, cannot be identified in Chronicles on more than a speculative basis. The approximate year is made clear by Luke who states that Jesus "began to be about thirty" when he was baptized in AD 29 Luke 3: The Prophet Micah also highlights this: Now let us look first at five holy days on the Venus Calendar and then discuss twelve steps from Christ to Adam. We do not know why his sons were disqualified:

Furthermore, interpolation between known dates would put the birth of Luke the star sets, it enters a womb of darkness for nearly two months. Augustine considers it a sufficient answer that Joseph was the father of Jesus by adoption, his legal father, through whom he could rightfully claim descent from David.
