Melaniona name possibly derived from melon the Greek word for both "apple" and fruit in general who defeated her by cunning, not speed. Therefore I will create her from the member which is hid, that is the rib, which is not even seen when man is naked.

Aphrodite, the goddess of love and beauty; Hera, the guardian of the home and Adam and Eve then leave the Garden, no longer living like naked, nomadic animals, they are compelled to toil for their food as farmers. However, as Appelbaum points out, malus may refer not only to the apple, but to any fruit with seeds: There is something that outlives the dualities: She is like one who has done wrong and is ashamed of people; therefore she goes out with her head covered. Therefore, as it stands, the Septuagint supports either reading.
